taking for his text Ephenistic iv, 13 He closed his discourse as follows

"You ought to be noblet men than most, because your work is vientous; you labor for the government, you stand for the executive hand of the government, you stand for the executive hand of the government of your land. You need not be trust because you are warriors, for war may to but discipline. It is the symbol of justice, of law, of liberty itself We are but just passed through a war white, with all its aircotties, and its incedental cracities, and horror of its details, will be looked back upon whose we have drifted so far on we can are it in perspective, as a sublime war for unity, liberty and bunnan happiness And all its blood drope, and all its tears, all its wrecks and devolutions will passe qui of view, and no man can measure the abundance of that good which will apring up its consequences of it. You are a part of the government; it behoves you to represent a man something better than common men do it is yours to guard a flag which now has more to tell the world than any other flag. Now, thank thod, its cleam Once there was blood on it. Not a drop now Once the stars that were in it were asters with a back ground us harbaric slavery. Now they are stars of hope, the world—"And those acripes that are uson the flag are no fare any of the proper in the seather it were asters with a back ground us harbaric slavery. American graveyards yield some curious fractive the way of optupbs; but we have never yet met with such a marvellous combination of business and pathos as is contained in the following oblitary notice, culled from a Spanish journel:

"This morning our Saviour summoned away the jeweller Siebald Himaga from his shop to another and a better world. The undersigned, his widow, will weep upon his tomb, as will also his two daughters, Hilds and Emms, the former by whom is married, and the latter is open to a whom is married, and the latter is open to "His disconsolate widow," "FRONIGUS LLMAGA.
